

I am who I am

I am who I am
as a human a good woman you have heard many of my written words in inspiring poems

And that's me being expressive in a crude way, what else can I say

I love being positive and lovable Once in a while I can explode on my husband

A misunderstanding, a discussion causing my mouth to utter the words "* " or * you But then we forget our ugly mood-swings and we hug each other

My life has been pretty and beautiful since my childhood, so from me you hear who I am I know where I stand

And do what I can to accept others with their expressions And ignore some for their pressure of not being nice and polite For me no need to be giving it "curu and sunu or bruto"

Thats not my style never was, never will be, I can tell you straight to your face what I think of you if you lost respect for me and will forgive you or put you aside

You see, life is like a roller coaster ride with bad days and good days
We all kind of explode
We all kind of expose Some with more self control Others selfish and ugly,

I have good parents, I had good teachers. Can not give you what you're asking for I wish I can love my fellow men some more, opening more doors to a brighter day
With God's loving showing the way
